Receivers Taft and Miller Will Not Grant Demands Made by Sully & Co.

SAY THEY HAVE NO POWER

Firm Asked That Large Amount of Cotton be Turned Over to Them.

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, May 28.-Receivers Taft and Miller, of the firm of Daniel J. Sully and Company, to-day decided refuse the request made by Mr. Sully resterday that they demand the turning which Mr. Sully claims were still open intracts on the day of the failure, and were not included in the failure, giving veral reasons for their refusal. They also refused the request of outside credibesides the members of the Cotton Exchange, for the payment to them in an equal division of the full margins

The receivers, in refusing Mr. Sully's The receivers, in refusing Mr. Sully's request, stated that they had no power to carry out the coup suggested, certainly not without a motion or order from the courts. They say that if they were in favor and could recommend such an order to the courts, they are not certain it would not result in serious loss of assets. Such a deal in 190,000 bales of cotton, they assert, would invoive $14,000,00 to $15,000,000. They are therefore not prepared to make such recommendation. The receivers says that even if Mr. Sully is right in his contention that the contracts are still open, it would be the contracts are still open, it would be a default, and that later he could recover his representatives could recover from e default, whether the receivers make

The receivers say:

"If the cotton were purchased at the contract prices, the receivers would have to pay about $2.09.00 more than the value at the present market price. But the suggestion is that by a skilful manipulation of the deal a corner may be created in spot cotton. In other words, as there are only 70.00 balgs in sight, the demand of the receivers for 190.009 bales would raise the price, so that, even if they had to take the cotton contract, prices, they could sell it at a profit, but it must be forgotten that there are forty of fifty persons upon whom the demand for delivery must be made, and that the receivers would have to be prepared on Tuesday to take any cotton tendered and at any time."

They then set forth that they have not sufficient funds to pay for the cotton that might be delivered under the contracts.

"Guide To Investors" FAMOUS RIDE OF HISTORY

Little Known Eighty Years After Paul Revere Made It.

HERE IS THE TRUE STORY

His Own Account of What Happened on That Ever Memorable Night.

Revere is probably to-day the most popular story of adventure in American history, yet it is an actual fact that for 80 years after it occurred no one knew anything about the incident save friends of the Revere family and a few particularly well informed students of the original ources of history.

It is also a fact that but for an all too brief account of the episeds left by Reand still preserved in the library of the pairloite stimulus of the story would in all probability have been lost to this and future generations.

Miss Rebecca Lash, who died lately, and was the only surviving person formany years past who ever personally knew Paul Revere, and who was for years almost a next door neighbor to him at the North End, told the Globe some years ago that she never heard of Revere's ride to Lexington until she was well advanced toward old age.

It was the genius of Longfellow, the long-forgotten story and moulded it into a form that enabled it to take a permanent hold upon the popular imagination and render the unostentatious, matter of-fact Paul Revere through all future ages one of the most romantic figures in American history. And there is slight doubt that Longfellow received his inspiration for the story from reading its simple account in Revere's own writing in the library of the Historical Society, of which the poet was a member, though either inadvertently or else for the purpose of adding to the dramatic interest he slightly disorted the facts.

"I called for the doctor and Mr. Hawes to come up. In an instant I was surrounded by four. They had placed themselves in a straight road that inclined cach way, they had taken down a pair of bars on the north side of the road, and two of them were under a tree in the pasture. The doctor being foremost, he came up, and we tried to get past them, but, they being armed with pistols and swords, they forced us into the pasture. The doctor jumped his horse over a low wall and got to Concord.

"I observed a wood at a small distance, and made for that. When I got there out started six officers on horse-back, and ordered me to dismount. One of them, who appeared to have the command, examined me, where I came from and what my name was. I told him, ite asked me if I was an express. I answered in the affirmative. He demanded what time I left Boston. I told him, and added that their troops had catched around in pausing the river, and that there would be 500 Americans there in a short time, for I had alarmed the country all the way up.
